Slavers: (1978-German) C-102 Slavers is about the slave trade business that went on in Africa throughout the 19th century. An excellent cast is saddled with second-rate script. Cast includes Trevor Howard, Ron Ely, Britt Ekland, Jurgen Goslar, Ray Milland, Ken Gampu, and Cameron Mitchell. (102 minutes, 1978)

A Bullet for the General: Blond gringo joins marauding guerrillas and shares to gory bloodletting. Not poor for the genre. Cast includes Maria Volonte, Lou Castel, Klaus Kinski, and Martine Beswick. (115 minutes, 1967)

Slaughterhouse 5: Occasionally slow, occasionally on track, spreading view of life through eyes of one Billy Pilgrim, virtuoso no one who gets to be "unstuck" in time. Large-spending limit adaptation of a weird fantasy novel is tough going for those with a producer's point of view. Cast includes Michael Sacks, Eugene Roche, Valerie Perrine, Holly Near, and Perry Emperor. (104 minutes, 1972)

Agnes Browne: Excellent-natured film in reference to a performing-style firm in late 1960s Dublin whose spouse has just died, leaving her to raise 7 youngsters on her own. Luckily, her best buddy O'Dwyer is unconditionally there to lend a hand. Comedy is opulent in environment although pat, with a subplot engaging singer Tom Jones shoving objects a tad too far. Cast includes Anjelica Huston, Marion O'Dwyer, Ray Winstone, Arno Chevrier, Gerard McSorley, and Tom Jones. (92 minutes, 1999)

I Love My Wife: The sort of comedy for which the word "automobile" was created. Infrequently ludicrous journal of Gould's lifelong sensual hang-ups agonizes from ignorant script, bland direction. Cast includes Elliott Gould, Brenda Vaccaro, Life saver Tompkins, Dabney Coleman, and Joan Tompkins. (95 minutes, 1970)

Ivan the Horrible: Film spectacle of the highest request. Eisenstein's remarkably lavish but detailed journal of King Ivan IV's life from coronation to conquer to reinstatement. A forging captivating icon of the gentleman and his nation can be found here. Improved by Prokofiev's primordial score so be it. Bulky going, although beneficial; the tale proceeds in Ivan the Awful. Cast includes Sergei Eisenstein, Nikolai Cherkassov, Ludmila Tselikovskaya, and Serafima Birman. (99 minutes, 1943)

Sugar and Spice: 5 high school cheerleader friends rally around their team commander while she gets to be pregnant by the school's new hotshot quarterback and level a robbery in request to help her out. Marsden is as fun as an egocentric imbecile. Substitute video rendition runs 84. Cast includes Marley Shelton, James Marsden, Mena Suvari, Marla Sokoloff, Rachel Blanchard, and Sara Bog. (81 minutes, 2001)

Macao: Flat yam allegedly set in gloomy title port, with Russell a singer and Mitchum the action-desiring guy she loves. Cast includes Robert Mitchum, Jane Russell, William Bendix, Gloria Grahame, and Thomas Gomez. (80 minutes, 1952)

Sideways: Giamatti gives another awesome-and thoroughly organic, completely believable-behavior as a would-be author. An enthusiastic xenophile and a communal black sheep who takes a college friend off for a week in California wine country before he gets wedded. During the voyage, this strange couple meets two desirable females who appear to return their interest. This work is nformed with humor, truth, empathy, and the eye for detail that marks most of Payne's work. Cast includes Paul Giamatti, Thomas Haden Temple, Virginiil Madsen, Sandra Oh, Marylouise Burke, and Jessica Hecht. (126 minutes, 2004)
